In the past, wainscot and paneling were used to prevent drafts in rooms. They soon evolved, displaying the owner's taste and personality with unique carvings and elaborate styles. Wainscot was so valued, it was often carted along from one home to the next.

Now wainscot and paneling is an excellent way to add history and architectural interest to your own home, in addition to warmth and elegance. Millard Lumber offers countless styles and woods to choose from, along with the expertise of Voigtman's Variety Woods. There is an art to beautiful solid wood wainscot, and Voigtman's experience and careful attention to proportion and details proves that.

Left: A dining room gains warmth and elegance from the glow of rich wood paneling. Opposite page, top: A detail leading to the dining room shows the depth achieved with the panels. Above: An office filled with antiques gains more character from the choice of paneling. Top: A transom window is beautifully highlighted with Voigtman's Custom Mouldings.
